

Horsemen Cooperate with Fliers in Defense Patrol

Two troops of the mounted patrol of the Civil Air Patrol, who engaged in practice problems Sunday, are shown coming back from the problem with a "survivor" of a theoretical plane crash, in the stretcher. The troops shown comprise a division headed by Ted Baker, troop leader, and L. E. Wilbur, leader. The troops were directed to a theoretical plane crash by "A" Flight of the air patrol, Harry Frost, pilot and George Laughton, observer. A division led by Jim Stead in Spanish Springs was directed from the air by "C" Flight, Carl Stanley, pilot and A. Boyne, observer. The fourth patrol, headed by Col. H.J. Erickson, worked with "B" Flight, Cliff Hansen, pilot, and Laverne Mueller, observer. Function of the mounted patrol is to rescue victims of an air accident after the air patrol has located the site of an accident.
