

Parachute Jumping Tests Are Planned

As part of their training as a first aid parachute unit of the civil air patrol, two students will make their initial jumps at the Sky Ranch airport north of Sparks Sunday morning, it was announced today from wing headquarters of the civil air patrol.

The air patrol is now training a number of persons to serve in first aid units which will be flown to crash scenes in remote areas and parachuted to assist injured pilots and crewmen. They will carry medical equipment and will be prepared to care for injured persons until the arrival of members of the mounted unit of the civil air patrol.

Members of the local unit are receiving parachute instruction from George Waltz of Reno.
